

A

ESAH ISHAK & ANOR

v.

KERAJAAN MALAYSIA & ANOR

B

HIGH COURT MALAYA, IPOH
BALIA YUSOF WAHI J
[CIVIL APPEAL NO: 12-17-2002]
15 AUGUST 2006

C

DAMAGES: Quantum - Multiplicand - Future loss of support - Whether grandparents of deceased also dependants - Whether Sessions Judge erred - Civil Law Act 1956, s. 7(2), (11) - Whether findings of Sessions Judge on award of damages substituted

D

DAMAGES: Quantum - Multiplier - Awarding multiplier of seven years - Reliance on Chan Chin Min v. Lim Yoke Eng - Whether erred - Whether discretion lay with Sessions Judge

E

The appellants herein appealed against the decision of the Sessions Court Judge against the quantum of damages awarded to them. The award was made on the basis of 100% liability on the respondents. The appeal was premised on the ground that the multiplicand of RM400 as found by the Sessions Judge had no basis and was unsupported by evidence. It was further submitted that the Sessions Judge had erred in awarding the multiplier of seven years in relying on the decision in Chan Chin Min v. Lim Yok Eng. The facts were that the Sessions Judge had found that both SP2 and SP3 (first and second appellant respectively) had received RM1,000 per month as support from their deceased sons.

F

In her judgment, the Sessions Judge had concluded that the first appellant was only entitled to an amount which she spent on herself and came to the conclusion that the sum of RM400 per month was reasonable for her upkeep. Similarly, the Sessions Judge also awarded the same amount per month being the loss of support for the second appellant. The Sessions Judge further held that under s. 7(2) of the Civil Law Act 1956, only the father and mother of the deceased could make a claim for the loss of support.

G

H

I

Held (allowing the appeal to the extent that the future loss of support be increased to RM800 per month with a multiplier of seven years):

(1) The Sessions Judge had erred in law in holding that only the father and mother of the deceased could make a claim for loss of support in the instant case. This court was inclined to accept the view that the sum of RM800 per month was a reasonable figure taking into consideration that the grandparents of the deceased were also the dependants in this case. The grandparents of the deceased and the husband of the second appellant (ie the father of the deceased) were 'the party for whom and for whose benefit the action is brought' and they were dependants of the deceased as specified in s. 7(2) and (11) of the Civil Law Act 1956.

(2) The Sessions Judge had failed to take any sufficient account of the uncontradicted evidence of the appellants with regard to the dependants of the deceased. There was no judicial appreciation of that evidence. On these premises, this court substituted the finding of the Sessions Judge on the award of damages.

(3) The Sessions Judge's reliance on the case of Chan Chin Min in awarding the multiplier of seven years to the appellants in the instant appeal was faultless. The discretion laid with her in determining the number of years' purchase (or multiplier) by taking into account the contingencies and circumstances of the case. On the facts of the case presented, there was nothing distinguishable from the facts in Chan Chin Min and coincidentally the facts of this appeal were almost if not wholly similar with the facts in Chan Chin Min, namely a claim made by a dependant of an unmarried person.

[The award of RM10,000 for bereavement be set aside and special damages in the sum of RM3,580 be awarded to both appellants; costs to the appellants.]

Case(s) referred to:

Cassell & Co Ltd v. Broome & Anor [1972] 2 WLR 645 (refd)

Chan Chin Min & Anor v. Lim Yok Eng [1994] 3 CLJ 687 SC (folld)

Cheng Bee Teik & Ors v. Peter Selvaraj & Anor [2005] 2 CLJ 839 CA (refd)

Co-operative Central Bank Ltd v. Feyen Development Sdn Bhd [1997] 3 CLJ 365 FC (refd)

- A Davies v. Powell Duffryn Associated Collieries Ltd [1942] AC 601 (refd)
Eng Thye Plantation Bhd v. Lim Heng Hock & Ors [2001] 4 CLJ 245 CA (refd)
Hooi Seng v. Ooi Pay Yeong [1995] 4 CLJ 229 HC (refd)
Ibrahim Ismail & Anor v. Hasnah Puteh Imat & Anor and Another Appeal [2004] 1 CLJ 797 CA (refd)
- B Lembaga Tatatertib Perkhidmatan Awam Hospital Besar Pulau Pinang & Anor v. Utra Badi K Perumal [2001] 2 CLJ 525 FC (refd)
Mohd Ali Alang v. Robiah Che Lam [1995] MLJU 343 (refd)
Periasamy Sinnapan & Anor v. PP [1996] 3 CLJ 187 CA (refd)
Phang Ah Chee v. Chong Kwee Sang [1975] 1 MLJ 153 (refd)
- C PP v. Datuk Tan Cheng Swee & Anor [1980] 2 MLJ 276 (refd)
Sivalingam Periasamy v. Periasamy & Anor [1996] 4 CLJ 545 CA (refd)
Tan Cheong Poh & Anor v. Teoh Ah Kow [1996] 3 CLJ 665 CA (refd)
Topaiwah v. Salleh [1968] 1 MLJ 284 (refd)
Wilson v. Pillay [1957] 3 All ER 525 (refd)
- D Woon Ngee Yew & Ors v. Ng Yoon Thai & Ors [1941] MLJ 32 (refd)

Legislation referred to:

Civil Law Act 1956, ss. 3A, 3B, 7(2), (3)(iv)(d), (11)

For the appellant - Ranjit Singh; M/s Ranjit Singh & Co

- E For the respondent - Pretam Singh Darshan Singh SFC (Normastura Ayub FC with him)

Reported by Suhainah Wahiduddin

F

JUDGMENT

Balia Yusof Wahi J:

- G [1] The appellants who were the plaintiffs in the court below brought this appeal against the decision of the learned Sessions Judge against the quantum of damages awarded to them. The award was made on the basis of 100% liability on the respondents. The appeal is premised on the ground that the multiplicand of RM400 as found by the learned Sessions Judge
- H has no basis and unsupported by evidence and further that the learned Sessions Judge has erred in awarding the multiplier of seven years in relying on the decision of the Supreme Court in Chan Chin Min & Anor v. Lim Yok Eng [1994] 3 CLJ 687 SC.
- I [2] Before the learned Sessions Judge, both parties agreed that special damages in the sum of RM13,580 be awarded to both the appellants. However at the out set of the appeal it was agreed that the said sum be reduced to RM3,580 by deducting the sum of RM10,000 being damages for bereavement, which the appellants are not entitled to pursuant to ss. 3A and 3B of the Civil Law Act 1956 (see Hooi Seng v. Ooi Pay Yeong [1995] 4 CLJ 229 and Mohd Ali b. Alang v. Robiah bt. Che Lam [1995] MLJU 343). On that premise, I accordingly ordered that the award for special damages be reduced to RM3,580 as agreed.

[3] Reverting to the main ground of the appeal, it was submitted by the learned counsel for the appellants that the figure RM400 arrived at by the learned Sessions Judge is erroneous and unsupported by evidence. In her grounds of judgment, the learned Sessions Judge has found that both SP2 and SP3 that is the first and second appellant respectively, received RM1,000 per month as support from their deceased sons. For both appellants, the said sum of RM1,000 is used not only to support themselves but also the grandparents of the deceased. For the first appellant, beside herself and her two other children, the said contribution is also used to support her ailing parents and being a widow, she relied solely on the contribution of RM1,000 from her deceased son. As for the second appellant, it was established that the said contribution of RM1,000 per month from her deceased son is for the support of herself, her husband, her four other children and as well as her mother that is the grandmother of the deceased. In her judgment, the learned Sessions Judge concluded that the first appellant is only entitled to an amount which she spent on herself and came to the conclusion that the sum of RM400 per month is reasonable for her upkeep. Similarly she also awarded the same amount of RM400 per month being the loss of support for the second appellant. She further held that under s. 7(2) of the Civil Law Act 1956 only the father and mother of the deceased could make a claim for the loss of support.

[4] It is the contention of appellants that the decision of the learned Sessions Judge in awarding RM400 as the loss of support is not supported by evidence or rather against the evidence adduced by the appellants. Her decision is also tainted as being contrary to the provisions of subsections (2) and (11) of s. 7 of the Civil Law Act 1956. The learned senior federal counsel has graciously conceded on this issue and was certainly right in doing so. Reading subsections (2) and (11) of s. 7 of the Civil Law Act 1956, the learned Sessions Judge has erred in law in holding that only the father and mother of the deceased, could make a claim for loss of support in the instant case.

A [5] For the sake of completeness, subsection (2) and (11) of the abovementioned provision read as follows:

[6] Compensation to the family of a person for loss of occasioned by his death.

B 7(1) ...

 7(2) Every such action shall be for the benefit of the wife, husband, parents, and child, if any, of the person whose death has been so caused and shall be brought by and

C in the name of the executor of the person deceased.

...

7(11) In this section unless the context otherwise requires

D – “child” includes son, daughter, grandson, granddaughter, stepson and stepdaughter;

 “parents” includes father, mother, grandfather and grandmother;

E “pension” includes a return of contributions and any payment of a lump sum in respect of a person’s employment:

F Provided that in deducting any relationship referred to in this subsection any illegitimate person or any person who has been adopted, or whose adoption has been registered, in accordance with any written law shall be treated as being or as having been the legitimate offspring of his mother and reputed father or, as the case may be, of his

G adopters.

[7] Having considered the evidence adduced by both the appellants in this case, I am inclined to accept the view of the learned counsel for the appellants that the sum of RM800 per

H month as suggested is a reasonable figure taking into consideration that the grandparents of the deceased are also the dependants in this case. Both the appellants has stated in their statement of claim filed in the court below that they brought the action “untuk faedah diri sendiri dan orang-orang tanggungan lain simati di

I bawah peruntukan Akta Undang-Undang Sivil 1956 dan khususnya ss. 7 dan 8 Akta berkenaan” – unquote.

[8] Edgar Joseph Jr. SCJ in his judgment in Chan Chin Min's case commented on persons entitled to a claim for loss of support as follows:

In my view, the plain, ordinary and grammatical meaning of the expression 'any loss of support suffered appearing in section 7(3), must refer to the loss of support suffered by the party for whom and for whose benefit the action is brought'. In other words, the loss suffered must be personal to the class of defendants specified in s. 7(2) so that a loss suffered by any other person not falling within that class must be excluded. (emphasis added).

[9] The grandparents of the deceased and the husband of the second appellant (ie the father of one of the deceased) are 'the party for whom and for whose benefit the action is brought' and they are dependants of the deceased as specified in s. 7(2) and (11) of the Civil Law Act 1956.

[10] In substituting the amount RM400 per month to RM800 per month for the first appellant, I am of the view that such would be a reasonable amount for the support of the first appellant herself as well as the ailing grandparents of the deceased, while for the second appellant the same amount I also deem it to be reasonable for her support as well as for the support of the father and the grandmother of the deceased. Both the appellants gave evidence in the lower court that the contribution made by their deceased sons was also meant for the support of both the grandparents and parents.

[11] This piece of evidence supports the claim and the averments of the appellants as stated in paras. 1 and 2 of their statement of claim which I have quoted and reproduced in part earlier.

[12] Interference by an appellate court with an award of damages by the trial judge must be a rare thing, so observed the great judge Lord Evershed MR in the case of Wilson v. Pillay [1957] 3 All ER 525. Our Federal Court in the case of Topaiwah v. Salleh [1968] 1 MLJ 284 has stated that:

So far as this court is concerned we should, to paraphrase Greer LJ in Flint v. Lovell be disinclined to reverse the finding of a trial judge as to the amount of damages merely because we think that if we had tried the case in the first instance we would have given a lesser sum. To justify reversing him, we should be convinced that he acted upon some wrong principle of law, or that the amount awarded was so extremely high or so very small as to make it an entirely erroneous estimate of the damage.

A [13] Appellate courts are always slow to interfere with the trial judge's decision on assessment of damages unless there is shown strong grounds for such interference (see: Phang Ah Chee v. Chong Kwee Sang [1975] 1 MLJ 153) and it is also trite law that the appellate court should not give preference to its own figure simply because they disagree with the figure arrived at by the trial judge. It will only interfere if it is satisfied that the trial judge has acted on a wrong principle of law or has for other reasons made a wholly erroneous estimate of the damage suffered – Tan Cheong Poh & Anor. v. Teoh Ah Kow [1996] 3 CLJ 665.

C [14] Perhaps it would not be superfluous at this stage to quote what Lord Wright has stated on the principle upon which an appellate court will interfere with an award of damages made by a judge sitting alone. In Davies v. Powell Duffryn Associated Collieries Ltd [1942] AC 601 at pp. 616-617 his Lordship stated as follows:

Where the award is that of a judge alone, the appeal is by way of rehearing on damages as on all other issues, but there is generally so much room for individual choice so that the assessment of damages is more like an exercise of discretion than an ordinary act of decision, the Appellate Court is particularly slow to reverse the trial judge on a question of the amount of damages. It is difficult to lay down any precise rule which will cover all cases, but a good general guide is given by Greer LJ in Flint v. Lovell. In effect the court, before it interferes with an award of damages, should be satisfied that the judge has acted on a wrong principle of law, or has misapprehended the facts, or has for these or other reasons made a wholly erroneous estimate of the damage suffered. It is not enough that there is a balance of opinion or preference. The scale must go down heavily against the figure attacked if the Appellate Court is to interfere, whether on the ground of excess or insufficiency.

[15] Apart from the issue of interference with an award of damages, I deem it necessary to dwell further on the issue of the powers and duties of this court in dealing with appeals before it.

H [16] Time and again we need to remind ourselves that an appellate court should be very loath to differ on a finding by a court which has seen and heard the witness. But if the trial court can be shown to have misdirected itself on the evidence, or to have rejected evidence for a wrong reason or to have drawn an inference from evidence which was equally capable of supporting a different inference it may very well be the duty of the appellate court to interfere (See: Woon Ngee Yew & Ors v. Ng Yoon Thai & Ors [1941] MLJ 32). In Sivalingam a/l Periasamy v. Periasamy & Anor [1996] 4 CLJ 545 the Court of Appeal observed that the appellate court will not readily interfere with the findings of fact arrived at by the court of first instance to which the law entrusts the primary task of evaluation of the evidence. But when the trial court has so fundamentally misdirected itself that one may safely say that no reasonable court which had properly directed itself and asked the correct question would have arrived at the same conclusion, the appellate court is under a duty to so intervene. On a similar issue, the Court of Appeal in Eng Thye Plantation Bhd v. Lim Heng Hock & Ors [2001] 4 CLJ 245, even went further to say that it would be an abdication of an appellate court's proper responsibility if it did not intervene and set right decision of trial courts that are plainly wrong or unjust.

I

[17] From my perusal of the record of appeal and having heard the submissions of both counsel for the appellants and the learned senior federal counsel, I am constrained to hold that this is one case where this court will not hesitate to interfere with the decision of the learned Sessions Judge in the assessment and award of damages.

[18] The learned Session Judge has misdirected herself on the point of law in failing to consider the provisions of s. 7(2) and (11) of the Civil Law Act 1956 and this has to be corrected. The Sessions Judge has also failed to take any or any sufficient account of the uncontradicted evidence of the appellants with regard to the dependants of the deceased. There is no judicial appreciation of that evidence. On those premises, I substitute the finding of the learned Sessions Judge on the award of damages in the terms as set out in the earlier part of my judgment.

[19] There is also another aspect of this appeal touching on the celebrated case of Chan Chin Min v. Lim Yok Eng (supra). Relying on the majority decision of the Supreme Court, the learned Sessions Judge allowed a multiplier of seven years instead of sixteen years as provided in s. 7(3)(iv)(d) of the Civil Law Act 1956. Both the deceased in this case were nineteen years of age at the time of death and unmarried. The learned Sessions Judge has estimated that should they be alive, they would have married in seven years time after taking into account the contingencies and

- A circumstances of the case. Learned counsel for the appellants contends that the multiplier should be 16 years as provided for in the Act and urged this court to follow the dissenting judgment of Edgar Joseph Jr SCJ in the said case. Learned counsel for the appellants further referred to me two other decisions of the Court
- B of Appeal namely, Ibrahim Ismail & Anor v. Hasnah Puteh Imat & Anor and Another Appeal [2004] 1 CLJ 797 and Cheng Bee Teik & Ors v. Peter Selvaraj & Anor [2005] 2 CLJ 839. The learned senior federal counsel, appearing for the respondents on the other hand submitted that the case of Chan Chin Min ought to be followed
- C and is binding upon this court.

- [20] The maxim 'stare decisis et non quieta movere' – to stand by decisions, and not to disturb settled matters, forms an integral part of our judicial system and as such it is worth reminding ourselves
- D that the decisions of the Superior Courts are strictly binding on the lower courts. As aptly put by Chang Min Tat FJ in Public Prosecutor v. Datuk Tan Cheng Swee & Anor [1980] 2 MLJ 276 at p. 277:

- E It is necessary to reaffirm the doctrine of stare decisis which the Federal Court accepts unreservedly and which it expects the High Court and other inferior courts in a common law system such as ours, to follow similarly. The doctrine of stare decisis requires more than lip service.

- F [21] Lord Hailsham in Cassell & Co Ltd v. Broome & Anor [1972] 2 WLR 645 gave a reminder as follows:

- The fact is, and I hope it will never be necessary to say so again, that in the hierarchical system of courts which exists in this country, it is necessary for each lower tier, including the Court
- G of Appeal, to accept loyally the decisions of the higher tiers. Where the decisions manifestly conflict, the decision in Young v. Bristol Aeroplane Co. Ltd [1944] KB 718 offers guidance to each tier in matters affecting its own decisions. It does not entitle it to question considered decisions in the upper tiers with the same freedom.
- H

- [22] The above quoted passage by Lord Hailsham has received full approval by our Federal Court in such cases like Co-operative Central Bank Ltd (in receivership) v. Feyen Development Sdn Bhd [1997] 3 CLJ 365 and Lembaga Tata tertib Perkhidmatan Awam Hospital Besar Pulau Pinang & Anor v. Utra Badi a/l K. Perumal [2001] 2 CLJ 525, where at pp. 562-563 Abdul Malek Ahmad FCJ stated:
- I

All things considered, we would venture to say that this court may have fallen into errors in granting leave on the second question. Especially so when it has been decided in Co-operative Central Bank Ltd (In receivership) v. Feyen Development Sdn Bhd [1997] 2 MLJ 829 that it was necessary for each lower tier to accept loyally the decision of the higher tiers and chaotic consequences would follow should the lower tier fail in his duty. It was therefore not open to an intermediate court of appeal, such as the Court of Appeal in the country, to disregard a judgment of a final court of appeal such as the Federal Court on the ground that it was given per in curiam.

A

B

C

[23] The need for an orderly development of legal rules and certainty of the law requires strict observance of the doctrine of stare decisis, and to borrow the words of Chang Min Tat FJ, it requires more than lip service. As judges of the inferior and lower tier courts, our hands are tied and are always bound by this doctrine of stare decisis. We are guided and constantly reminded by the strong words of his Lordship Gopal Sri Ram JCA who in Periasamy a/l Sinnapan & Anor v. PP [1996] 3 CLJ 187 cautioned in the fashion as follows:

D

E

We may add that it does not auger well for judicial discipline when a High Court Judge treats the decision of the Supreme Court with little or no respect in disobedience to the well entrenched doctrine of stare decisis. We trust that the occasion will never arise again when we have to remind High Court Judges that they are bound by all judgments of this Court and of the Federal Court and they must, despite any misgivings a judge may entertain as to the correctness of a particular judgment of either court, apply the law as stated therein (see Mirehouse v. Rennell All ER 1015, Cooper v. Southern Portland Cements Ltd [1972] 46 AJLR 302, Cassell & Co. Ltd. v. Broome & Anor [1972] AL 1027, Miliangos v. George Frank (Textiles) Ltd [1975] 2 WLR 555 at p. 564, PP v. Datuk Tan Cheng Swee & Anor [1980] 2 MLJ 276 at page 277, Kathavarayan v. Ng Sup Moi & Anor [1987] 1 MLJ 246 at page 250, Co-operative Central Bank Ltd (In receivership) v. Feyen Development Sdn Bhd [1977] 2 MLJ 829 at page 836-837, Dalip Bhagwan Singh v. PP [1997] 4 CLJ 645 and Lembaga Tata tertib Perkhidmatan Awam Hospital Besar Pulau Pinang & Anor v. Utra Badi a/l K. Perumal [2001] 2 MLJ 417).

F

G

H

[24] In conformity with the above stated principle and reasons, I hold that the learned Sessions Judge's reliance on the case of Chan Chin Min in awarding the multiplier of seven years to the appellants in the instant appeal is faultless. The discretion still lies

I

- A with her in determining the number of years' purchase (or multiplier) by taking into account the contingencies and circumstances of the case. On the facts of the case presented, there is nothing distinguishable from the facts in Chan Chin Min and coincidentally the facts of this appeal are almost if not wholly
- B similar with the facts in Chan Chin Min, namely a claim made by a dependant of an unmarried deceased person.

- [25] In the result, this appeal is therefore allowed to the extent that the future loss of support be increased to RM800 per month
- C with a multiplier of seven years and the award of RM10,000 for bereavement be set aside and special damages in the sum of RM3,580 be awarded to both the appellants as agreed. Costs to the appellants.

D

E

F

G

H

I